

Ross Forzatti BEng
Senior Structural Engineer

Ross brings 7 years experience in Structural Engineering to his role at STP Consultants with extensive experience in residential, commercial, industrial and institutional projects. His focus on client satisfaction; efficiency and economy of design make him a favorite with architects, building designers and builders across North Queensland.

Ross is returning to STP Consultants, commencing May 2017, reprising his role as a Senior Structural Engineer.

Background & Experience

Ross Forzatti graduated with a degree in Civil Engineering from James Cook University in 2001. He commenced his engineering career working as a Civil Engineer for Penna & Company working in road construction and gaining experience in tendering, contracts and project management. He then moved on to begin his structural engineering career. Working for two years with Connell Wagner in Mackay where he was exposed primarily to residential design, including component design of a 10-storey apartment complex.

In 2006, Ross joined STP Consultants and over the next five years worked his way up to Senior Structural Engineer. During his time, Ross developed his design skills to tackle projects ranging from basic houses, large industrial, commercial and institutional projects, often leading a small team of draftspersons; and coordinating with a multi-disciplinary team of contractors to achieve the desired outcome for the client.
